The architecture must address and support multiple levels of protection and application security needs. It will facilitate trusted and efficient access and define protections that enable trust in the cloud. It will also provide direction to secure information that is protected by regulations and will support the authentication of users on multi-tenant platforms, operating systems, and applications. The architecture must be able to support access that is cryptography based and extend multiple levels of protection, including network, operating system, application, and data protection.